

Youth Forum 2013

University of Kentucky Human Development Institute

Youth with disabilities can sometimes have a difficult time transitioning from high school to the adult world. One of the best ways to find out what the needs are of young people is to ask them. We are conducting a one day youth forum that will bring together older youth (ages 21 to 30) with special health care needs that have successfully transitioned from high school. Share your experience and help set the advocacy agenda for Kentucky's efforts to remove barriers to successful transition.

Participants in the Forum will also have the opportunity to apply to become peer mentors to youth with special health care needs who are preparing to transition.
